Our auction venue

The Royal Society for the encouragement of Arts, Manufactures and Commerce was founded in 1754, by William Shipley, a drawing master from Northampton, who assembled a group of the most eminent artists, philosophers and scientists of the day and declared that the objectives of his Society were 'to embolden enterprise, to enlarge science, to refine art, to improve our manufactures and to extend our commerce. The Society moved to its present premises, which were purpose built by the Adam brothers as part of their Adelphi development, in 1774.

Our logo

A. H. Baldwin and Sons Ltd., founded in 1872, has had premises in The Adelphi since the 1920's and since 1970 at 11 Adelphi Terrace. The original terrace was demolished in 1936. The drawing is derived from part of Robert Adam's original plans for his Royal Terrace, and depicts the house at the West end of the Terrace at the corner of Robert Street.

Miles states in his note on this coin that "particular interest attaches to the present specimen in that it is the earliest of the experimental dirham types that led eventually to the Caliph 'Abd al-Malik's sweeping coinage reform". It is also interesting to note that although it was undoubtedly struck under the authority of 'Abd al-Malik, he chose to issue it in the name of the long-dead Sasanian ruler Khusraw II instead of his own. This practice had long since been abandoned in the former Sasanian territories where the names of Umayyad caliphs and governors were in general use.

This is an important coin in that it contains the earliest mention of the mother of al-Amin, the lady Zubayda, known as Umm Ja'far. In 186h she declared her opposition to Ja'far al-Barmaki and this coin provides evidence that her son, out of loyalty, took her side against the formerly all-powerful wazir of al-Rashid, Ja'far al-Barmaki.

- 101 al-Amin (193-198h), Dinar, no mint 195h, rev field li'l-Khalifa/ - / al-Amin, 4.25g. Extremely fine. £125-150

- 103 al-Ma'mun, Dinar, Misr 209h, governor 'Ubaydallah bin al-Sari, 4.12g (Lowick 142). Slightly clipped, fine. £60-80

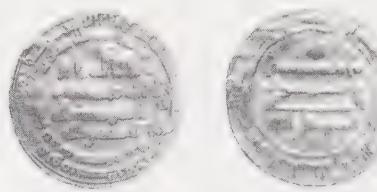

- 104 al-Ma'mun, Dirham, San'a' 217h, 2.96g (Lowick -). Extremely fine and extremely rare. £800-1,000

This remarkable coin is a previously unrecorded issue from the mint of San'a' in the Yemen. It is clear from both the calligraphy and striking of this piece that it was either produced at the mint of Madinat al-Salam and sent to San'a' or that Abbasid mint workers were despatched to San'a' with their dies to demonstrate to the Yemenis how the new reform coinage should be struck.

- 111 al-Mutawakkil, Dirham, Madinat al-Mutawakkiliya 247h, 2.91g. Very fine and rare. £150-200

- 112 al-Mutawakkil, Dirham, Makka 268h or 238h, 5.12g. Very fine and extremely rare. £5,000-6,000

This is an interesting but mystifying coin. The decade of the date clearly reads sittin not thalathin, and the caliph is clearly al-Mutawakkil not al-Mu'tamid. If the date was an error for 238 it would presumably have the heir cited as abu-'Abdallah bin Amir al-Mu'minin in the obverse field. If it were al-Mu'tamid it would either be al-Mufawwid or al-Muwaffaq in the obverse field. But, perhaps because of the special character of the Holy City, the names of the heirs or divisional rulers could have been omitted from the coinage. The mint name, however, is unambiguously legible. It is a previously unrecorded issue.

It is likely that this purely Abbasid dinar from Baghdad represents a period of uncertainty in the struggle between Muhammad and Barkiyaruq for supreme power in the Saljuq realms. Under the uncertain circumstances of who was temporarily on top the caliph felt free to take a neutral course and place his own name exclusively on his coinage.

- 146 al-Nasir (575-622h), Dinars (4), Madinat al-Salam, 603h, 7.16g, 617h, 4.65g, 618h(2), 6.65g and 5.12g. All fine. (4) £500-600

The practice of inserting fragments of other coins into the cut flans of dirhams was well known in the third century of the Hijra in Umayyad Spain. This is the only occurrence that the cataloguer knows of where the same practice is employed with dinars. The motive behind this is not entirely clear.

- 149 al-Nasir, Dinar, Takrit 611h, 5.00g. About fine and extremely rare. £3,000-4,000

Takrit lies about 30 miles north of Samarra on the west bank of the Tigris, and Le Strange states that it was commonly counted as the last town of Iraq. In the past it was famous for its watermelons. Today it is much more famous as the home town of the clan which presently rules the country and the birthplace of its ruler. Takrit is virtually unknown as a late Abbasid mint.

This appears to be an unrecorded example of the tabari dirham or hemidrachm of Tabaristan and the first one to bear the name of a reigning caliph. Rather than using his caliphal name al-Mahdi, the die-sinker employed his ism Muhammad. While every other legend is fully legible, only one part of the date can be read and that is HF which stands for the numeral 7. If the post-Yazdigerd era is being used it would stand for 127 PYE or 162h. If it is a Hijri year it would be 167h.

'ALAWI SHARIFS

The following 11 lots comprise an important group of Spanish trial pieces for the Moroccan coinage of 1201h (1787AD). It is well known that Sidi Muhammad III of Morocco requested the government of Charles III of Spain to strike a series of gold and silver coins for his kingdom. Up to this time only one denomination was known, and that from only a handful of specimens: the famous matbu kabir or 5 bunduqi coinage bearing the mint name Madrid and dated 1201h. Fustache, in his corpus of Alawite coinage, Vol.I, pp.175-192, discusses the textual evidence for these coins, but concludes that up until the time of writing in 1984 only a few examples of the matbu kabir had been found, and not one example, not even an essay, of the three other denominations had ever been discovered. However, in Spink Auction 133 (May 1999), a pattern dirham with the mint name Madrid (lot 136) was sold. The present group provides a clear picture of the projected coinage. There were to have been three gold denominations, the matbu kabir or 5 bunduqi, which had not yet been struck in Morocco, the bunduqi and the half bunduqi, and four silver denominations, the mithqal, or piece of ten dirhams, bearing the mint name Marrakush and dated 1201, the dirham, of the same mint also dated 1201, with a sample sent from Morocco as its pattern, a half dirham or 2 mazuna, of Marrakush 1201, which was a projected denomination, not yet included in the Moroccan coinage, and a mazuna, of which a sample was also sent to Madrid. It was anticipated that the gold would be struck in Madrid and the silver in Seville, but, in the event, the whole process of production and approval dragged out and in 1204h, after the death of Sidi Muhammad III, his son Muhammad al-Yazid declared war on Spain and the project was dropped with only a few examples of the matbu kabir left to tell the tale. This group forms an important contribution to the numismatic history of Morocco as well as that of Spain, since it was the first request from a Muslim to a European state for assistance in preparing a modern coinage.

The mint name Sijilmasa on the Fatimid coinage appears to be one of the rarest of the series, being known only from this coin of 374h and another from the year 369h. It was, however, a regular Fatimid mint for the coinage of al-Mu'izz and his predecessors when the local Fatimid coinage employed the legends and designs of the mintless dinars of the Midrarids.

- 220 al-Mustansir, Dinar, Barqa 444h, 4.12g. Very fine and extremely rare. £2,000-2,500
- Barqa was the only Fatimid mint in Cyrenaica, in today's eastern province of Libya. Its coinage output must have been very small because its dinars are of the highest rarity.

- 226 al-Mustansir, Dinar, al-Mahdiya 449h, 4.05g (Hazard 15 var). Good very fine and very rare. £1,000-1,200

It was in this year that the rump of the Zirid state in Tunisia returned to Fatimid suzerainty and reintroduced the Shi'a kalima and the name of the caliph al-Mustansir to their coinage.

- 227 al-Mustansir, Dinar, al-Mahdiya 451h, month of Rabi' al-awwal, 4.18g (Hazard 16 var). Very fine and extremely rare. £1,500-2,000

This coin is notable in that while it mentions the caliph al-Mustansir, it omits the phrase 'Ali wali Allah' normally inscribed in the obverse field of Fatimid coins.

CRUSADER IMITATIONS OF FATIMID DINARS

- 247 Anonymous (al-Amir), Dinar, Iskandariya 490h (sic), 4.37g (with blundered legends and an impossible date). Crude very fine, rare. £250-300

It is difficult to explain the curious features of this coin other than by suggesting that it is a contemporary imitation of a Fatimid dinar issued by another authority, the only likely one being a Crusader commander. The Fatimid mints in Egypt were remarkably careful in both their die-cutting and striking techniques, therefore any substantial errors such as those found on this coin must brand it as the work of outside hands. al-Amir's coinage between 495h and 500h, while much rarer than that of the latter part of his reign, was both clearly engraved and accurately dated.

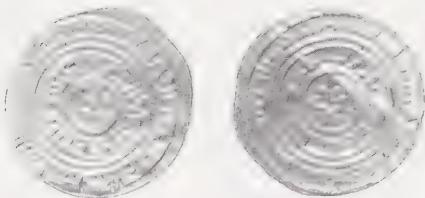

- 248 Anonymous (al-Amir), Bezant or Dinar, no mint name or date, 3.69g. Extremely fine. £125-150

With the exception of one coin struck at Tabriz, the first Safavid capital, all the coins were struck at mints in eastern Anatolia. This was the area where the Safavids gathered their strength before marching into Iran. Coins from these mints are seldom available.
